MONDAY, MAY 28, 1906.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

4,134

Only two weeks left before the census.

Fortunately the veterans have another try with the weather on Wednesday to make up for the failure of yesterday.

There will be some interesting developments in Burlington on June 28. Reason—it is the Democratic state convention.

The teachers and scholars are on the last and hardest round on the whole year—the time when the outdoors call is the strongest.

If Alfonso and Ena escape a wedding present in the shape of a bomb this week, they may consider their honeymoon well started.

Barre and Montpelier each increases its influence in the Republican state convention by one vote because of the growth in the Republican vote, while Rutland drops three delegates.

The mistake in placing too much reliance on "expert" testimony was never more satisfactorily shown than in the developments in the Charles L. Tucker case which is now reaching the acute stage in Massachusetts. The so-called expert is now wavering like a reed shaken in the wind.

History is repeating itself in England. In the last of the eighteenth century the American colonies declared that taxation without representation was unbearable, and they resisted. Now one of the leading women's suffragists in a bitter speech makes the same declaration, adding that if the women are not allowed to vote they will not pay taxes. They have not yet dumped the tea into the harbor, however.

COLLEGE MEN IN BASE BALL.

According to the new athletic eligibility rules which have just been adopted by the Brown university at Providence, any college man will be permitted to earn money by base ball in summer and still be eligible to play on the Brown varsity nine, provided he does not play under what is known as the "national agreement." This rule was, without doubt, chosen primarily to allow Brown athletes to play on summer hotel teams, where the athletes are induced to lend their base ball usefulness as an amusement for the guests, for a stipend. But it is not publicly known that they are paid for ball playing. Instead, they are given positions as bell boys, caretakers of boats, swimming instructors and various other niches in the summer hotel business. Ostensibly they are paid for their services in the several capacities named, but actually they pay little attention to the duties of those "official" positions; and were they to be paid for that they would not earn their breakfasts, judging by the work done. Now Brown ball players will have a chance to remove the cloak of secrecy at the summer resorts. More than that, they can engage to play in the Northern base ball league of Vermont and still not jeopardize their amateur standing, for the Northern league is not under the "national league agreement." There has been a tendency in late years to let out the barriers of amateurism a few notches and the action of the Brown athletic association is the first to be taken by the colleges.

In so doing the Providence college has decided to do away with the hypocrisy which characterizes nearly every college in the country to a greater or lesser extent. They claim to allow only "Simon pure" athletes to represent them while either they or the athletes themselves know that the claim is only rank dissimulation. College men, particularly college men who need the money, go where there will be little possibility of their being recognized and they play ball for money; and when their institutions reopen in the fall they return to college with the cloak of hypocrisy wrapped about them. If they be especially good athletes few institutions will take the trouble to detect them unless it is feared that other institutions have the secret. If there is danger of detection, the college will, with a grand flourish of trumpets, proclaim the summer-players-for-money to be "professionals" and not eligible to represent the college, while they listen for the plaudits of the public. Brown has now taken itself out of that class.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

THE "A-B" SEA.

There lives in some outlandish place
 A sadly disputatious race;
 Theirs is a very curious case.

For, whatsoever the reason be,
 It seems they never could agree
 About the color of the sea.

One section of them took the view
 That it was obviously blue;
 There was no doubt, they said; they knew.

But others said: "What do you mean?
 The sea is obviously green;
 As can be seen by anyone."

While yet another lot said, "Nay,
 The sea is obviously gray;
 So anyone of sense would say."

The rival factions came on board
 My yacht, and earnestly implored
 That I would end their discord.

Thus importuned, I answered, "Halt,
 It seems to me you're all at fault.
 Do you agree the sea is salt?"

"Yes," they replied, "but you forget"—
 "No, wait, I haven't finished yet.
 Do you agree the sea is wet?"

They did. "Well, let us start with that,
 Let all your children get it pat!
 It's quite enough for any brat."

"When they are bigger, let them choose
 Among the greens and grays and blues;
 (Some interruption here, and boos.)"

In vain I emptied wisdom's store;
 "No colorless belief!" they swore,
 And set to wrangling as before.

And still by some the ocean's seen
 As blue, to others it is green,
 Or gray, or various hues between.

Last Summer's Suit.

Hard luck! I found a dollar bill
 In my last summer's suit.
 For joy I bent and blew it in,
 With several more to find.

Limitations.

Who first called a woman "a cat"
 Was neither observing nor nice;
 There's a very wide difference, I'm sure,
 In the views that they hold about mice.

Of course, both are purring and soft;
 And alike they will scratch you, but still
 A woman can't run up a tree,
 Nor a cat up a milliner's bill.
